TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 28, 1865.

The Policy of the Administration.

The policy of the Government under the present administration is laid down in the past. We have still Lincoln and his Cabinet, with Seward to guide and wield the diplomacy that makes the foreign policy and the same efficient Cabinet officers and Generals to handle the Army and Navy. There is success in every notion of the past. The decisive successes of the National arms won for the Government confidence at home and great abroad, and with a continuance of that successful policy, or that policy that secures success both at home and abroad, we may look for less difficulties in the question of gold and greenbacks to follow the coming of peace. President Lincoln has nothing to promise us that is new, no policy to inaugurate that he has not already enunciated.

The latest foreign news we have gives the statement that Napoleon has declared his intention to maintain the Empire of Mexico, while we are told by the London Times that the idea of war between England and America is merely absurd. The last proposition is very comforting and pleasant. We seek no quarrel, least of all with England, and as to France, it is difficult to decide if the position of Napoleon, with a Mexican Empire on his hands, is most pitiful or absurd. The old story of the lucky fellow who drew an elephant in a lottery, is repeated in his case with an emphasis. On the whole, we are rather inclined to admire his consistency in declaring his intention to stand by Maximilian, if, indeed, he entertains it. No doubt he seduced Maximilian into the idea of becoming Emperor of the Greasers, and now he can do no less than stand by him.

Meanwhile the foreign policy of Secretary Seward comes into beautiful play. No doubt France is anxious to know what is coming. If there is war coming, the two Emperors would prefer to encounter it now, under the same state of home difficulties that induced them to flaunt an Empire in the face of the Monroe doctrine, and the axioms of American history. Seward temporizes, and exchanges compliments. He issues diplomatic notes, and deals in diplomatic style with important questions, allowing no such point blank issues as the Maximilian question to be brought to a head in these times, when we can't afford to assume any more quarrels if they can be consistently avoided. Napoleon has no cause for quarrel, unless based upon suspicion, and Seward very sensibly has no quarrel to urge until we can better afford to undertake it at some more convenient season.

It is an admirable thing to have patience, and to forbear judgment on public and private grounds until one understands them, but unfortunately the world is full of inconsiderate minds who pronounce judgment in advance, and listen to the case afterwards. So it has been in dealing with the Government, in relation to its foreign and domestic policy. The whole is safe in the hands of the Administration, experience has taught its lessons, and by its light the rebellion is fading away; by its aid the United States preserves peace abroad while it is endeavoring to regain peace at home. Should France, indeed, take upon itself to support the Empire it has endeavored to establish in Mexico, the time may come when we will have to consider the matter by the rules and precedents of American history, and act accordingly. It is well enough to postpone that time until a more convenient season than the present.

A PROPHESY FOR DEMOCRATS.—The following extract, says the Union, from a speech recently delivered in Congress by James S. Rollins, of Missouri, upon the anti-slavery constitutional amendment, is good reading for those Democratic editors in this State who do not seem to know what is going on in the world, or at least do not profit themselves by the light which is overspreading the Eastern heavens. Rollins formerly represented one of the strongest slave districts of Missouri, and more recently distinguished himself as a Border State conservative. A Kentuckian by birth and a Missourian by adoption, he is convinced by the experience of this rebellion that slavery is injurious to the interest of the white man, abhorent to the sentiment of the age, and inconsistent with the peace and dignity of the nation:

> One other remark. Missouri has in advance adopted this amendment. Now, allow me, although not much given to prophesy, being neither a prophet nor a son of a prophet, to make one other prediction upon this floor to-day. It is this: if the constitutional amendment be adopted by this House, or whether it be adopted by this House or not, it will be adopted by the Congress which will be immediately to succeed this, in less than ninety days from the time of our adjournment, it will become the prevailing sentiment, and will be adopted not alone by the North, but by every Southern State. I do not doubt it. How is it the people, as the masters of the people of Missouri have adopted it there. Think? When the poor and humble farmers and mechanics of the States of Alabama and Mississippi shall have left the bloody trials in which they are now engaged to enter down this temple of human liberty, some time hence, perhaps, to their desolated homes; when they shall look once more upon and hug to their bosoms the wives and children whom they love, in poverty and in rags; when they will say, perhaps without an eye, or without a leg, and in poverty to those who are dependent upon them for support in life, taught by experience, as I have been taught by experience, they will ask the question of themselves: "Why all this? What have we been fighting for?" They will bring to mind the sweet memories of other days. They will remember the peaceful and happy home that they were induced to leave and which they rejoiced under the benign influences of independence and liberty passed here, and they will inquire, "By what sophistry, by what appeal, by what force, by what maddening influence was it that we were been induced to enter into this terrible rebellion? Not to protect any interest of life and children, but to destroy all the blessings vouchsafed to us and to them by a free Government and equitable laws;" and they will further ask, "Who has been the author of my misfortunes, and the ruin of my family, my all?" Sir, they will point to those who hold the power at Richmond; they will direct their vengeance against them; and Davis and his traitorous crew, as I have said upon a former occasion, will, like Actæon of old, be torn to the end destroyed by their own friends.

> I do not doubt this at all. The masses of the people of the South have no special interest in, no sympathy with, the institution of slavery. The number of slaveholders is small, and, whenever you begin to drive up the wedge and exemplify the dividing line between those whose moral convictions say that slavery is right, and those who, from property interest, identified and associated with it, and that great volume of humanity who, upon the other side of the question, deny the moral right of slavery and have no interest whatever in it, I tell you the result will be final ruin to the cause of the institution. And it is in this way that in Georgia, in Arkansas, and in South Carolina even, at last, the very amendment we propose to adopt here to-day will receive the sanction of the great majority of the people of those States. I judge from what I have seen in my own State. I judge from the fact that only a few years ago men who owned no slaves, but controlled by that power were nearly crazy upon that subject for fear I would do something to set my own slaves free. And now they are equally offended with me because I happen to be found in the unfortunate minority of owning slaves. Southern public sentiment, Northern public sentiment, American public sentiment, and, I may add, the sentiment of the civilized world, now, is from the beginning, from the very day of the adoption and ratification of the Constitution, against the humanity, the Christianity and the philosophy of the longer continuance of the institution of slavery among us.

GAME.—The country at the present time abounds with the finest quality of game, fish and fowl, and it is somewhat remarkable that having such a reputation for excellent varieties, the market does not keep our markets supplied with a more bountiful contribution. Fowls are high priced, and they should offer some remuneration to the purchaser in the way of affording him a satisfactory meal, but it is a rare thing to find a fat barnyard fowl in market. Ducks, geese, pheasant, quail, swan, and an unlimited number of such wild species of the feathered tribe would meet with a demand that would greatly compensate the people that had undertaken the scheme—if they made clean work of it.

(SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.)

DATES TO MARCH 21.

Local Meeting at Wilmington.

DEATH OF MAJOR MASON, March 19. In consequence of the death of the Major-Gen'l Wilmington, on the evening of the 14th, a very large meeting, including many of the most prominent citizens, was held, having in charge the arrangements for the funeral, which took place this morning. The remains were escorted to the depot by the Union Light Infantry, the Wilmington Light Infantry, and the Wilmington Rifles, and a large number of citizens. The procession was headed by the Wilmington Band, playing the funeral dirge. The coffin was covered with flowers. Gen. Sherman's two children, Major Hoyt and Lieut. Thorpe, acted as pall-bearers. The body was followed to the depot by a large number of citizens, including the staff, officers and soldiers of Gen. Sherman's command. The entire South Atlantic Department was represented. The Richmond and Danville and Richmond and Petersburg Railroads have given free transportation to the remains.

The Mayor issued a proclamation requesting that all business be suspended during the funeral. All political differences are buried in the future, and nothing but the most cordial feeling exists, the object is to conduct the funeral in the most appropriate manner. The remains will be taken to Raleigh, N. C., for interment.

The war goes on with unabated vigor.

Alabama Operations.

WASHINGTON, March 20. The Navy Department to-day received the following:

> Flag-ship Octorara, off Fort Gaines, Mobile Bay, March 5. I have the honor to inform you that I took a pilot out of the late rebel steamer Selma, captured Eliza Lewis about the beginning of the month, and went down to Mobile Shoals. A large force of Gen. Ready's command drove him off, penetrated Elk river, and in making good success in encouraging loyal feeling on the south side of the river. The enemy were constantly coming in and taking the oath. [illegible] in regiments I have had with me prisoners of war. I think there is no doubt but that Alabama will return to her allegiance by the Queen's birthday.

Prospect of a Naval Fight.

NEW YORK, March 20. The Times Paris correspondent says that a naval council was held on the 6th inst., at which Admiral Dupont was present, authorizing Page, commander of the rebel steamer Stonewall, to attack the U. S. fleet in the harbor of Ferrol. Our Spanish fleet is composed of the steamers Mercedes and Isabella II, mounting 14 guns each.

The Stonewall arrived in the harbor of Ferrol on the 8th inst., which leads to some apprehension as to the result, as our vessels are not armed. The Spanish authorities, however, have mounted a heavy battery, and are determined to have their neutrality respected.

Jeff. Davis Deposed.

NEW YORK, March 21. The Herald's special says: It was reported in Washington yesterday that Jeff. Davis had abandoned his position as President of the Southern Confederacy, and handed the reins of the sinking government to Lee, with the understanding that the latter as Supreme Dictator would make one desperate effort with such resources as intelligent management could command for several days within the limits it has given rise to this expectation. The early evacuation of Petersburg is looked for.

It is reported that Sherman and Schofield were moving on the Weldon Railroad. Our troops are in fine spirits.

The Herald's Wilmington correspondent of the 18th says: All the refugees, deserters and prisoners brought in by Sherman are being brought to that place.

On the 14th Sherman left Fayetteville, marching towards Goldsboro. Before leaving, the extensive arsenal was destroyed. It being the largest in the South; every cotton mill, several foundries and six small steamers were also destroyed. The rebels will make a stand, of at all, at or near Goldsboro. Johnston having united with Bragg and Conger, and reinforcements having come from Richmond, make a combination which they hope will defeat Schofield and Sherman combined. If successful they calculate to retreat and crush Grant.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Passengers who arrived to-day from City Point all news is in Sherman reached there Sunday. He had occupied Goldsboro without resistance, having connected with Schofield.

Correspondence between Davis, Lee and Grant, concerning military convention to settle difficulties, is published. The only new fact is that Davis closed his letter with the words—"under such an arrangement a will cease at once a temporary suspension of hostilities."

NEW ORLEANS, March 13. The Picayune says: On Saturday last an attack was made on two batteries defending Mobile by the Monitors, which silenced the batteries and drove the men from their guns.

Gen. Hinjiman, while en route to Mexico, was shot by some persons unknown, but supposed to be rebels, between Oak Hill and the Rio Grande. He had a number of wagons and cattle, and considerable plate and coin, and when killed was in advance of the train.

The Late Flood.

PITTSBURG, March 20.—We have but meager details of losses by the late floods. The total loss is immense, being moderately estimated at over two millions.

PITTSBURG, March 20.—The Pittsburg Chronicle of Saturday says: The Allegheny river during Friday afternoon 17th rose four inches.

CINCINNATI, March 18. The floods in Ohio and Pennsylvania having reached their highest points are reported to be going down as rapidly as they came.

Miscellaneous News.

The President has appointed John Bigelow, present Charge d'Affairs at Paris, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of France.

BOSTON, March 20.—Capt. Pettigrew of the British bark Sea Gem at this port states that the rebel pirate Tallahassee was in Bermuda on March 11th under another name.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The schooner Shooting Star, of Boston, went ashore at Turtle.

The Navy Department has received information of the capture and destruction of the rebel steamer Adais Dale, by an expedition from the United States gunboat Pagosa on the 5th, in Pass Cavallo, Texas.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Kennedy, who was arrested at a concert, since convicted of being a spy, is to be hanged at La Fayette on Saturday next.

The Central Bank was robbed yesterday of ten forty and five twenty bonds, amounting to sixty-nine thousand dollars.

The monitor Dictator arrived here to-day. Her officers speak of her in the highest terms. A portion of the time she made 12 knots an hour using 24 furnaces out of 36.

North Carolina War News.

NEWBERN, N. C., March 19th, 10 A. M.—Our forces now occupy Kinston and are repairing the bridge across Neuse river, which will be finished in a few days. The enemy were demonstrated on leaving Kinston for Goldsboro.

Most of the North Carolina troops, belonging to the eastern part of the State, took French leave at Bragg and returned to their homes.

A Goldsboro' journal of the 17th states that a council of war was held not more than 30 miles from that city. The following were present of the leading Generals, among which were their generalissimo, General Lee. The weather is very warm, showing the mercury at 70° in the shade.

A Colonel, belonging to Sherman's army, has just arrived from Wilmington. He states that Sherman will be in Goldsboro on the 20th March.

The enemy send no rumors of bad news from Sherman.

The Treasury Department and military authorities are in favor of having Newbern and Morehead City, N. C., designated ports of entry.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Information from the Army of the Potomac to Saturday morning was heard all day Saturday in front of the rebel works, without any other sign of engagement than to indicate our troops that they still have an enemy opposite them.

Sheridan Heard from Again.

NEW YORK, March 21. The Herald's City Point correspondent says: Sheridan reached White House on the 19th. He lost two guns and two caissons. Near by 200 negroes came in with him. He had to cut back through a country unable to feed and pass his command. Wagons were destroyed. Sheridan was met at White House with everything needed for further movements. The army of the James is still idle.

BALTIMORE, March 21. The steamer Georgiana arrived at Washington during the night. Details and despatches from Sheridan's HQ also brought seven rebel flags, captured by Sheridan during his march, seven of which he captured himself from Lee's headquarters. Sheridan was at White House on Sunday, but was contemplating a move towards the James river, where he has probably arrived.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING

CLOTHES WRINGER

AWARDED THE FIRST PREMIUM

AT OREGON STATE FAIR IN 1864.

Also the Premium for Machine on Committee's Report of the San Francisco "AMERICAN INSTITUTE" INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION, 1864.

The CLOTHES WRINGER is a variety of those Premiums as Double-Acting Wringers, but is unlike any of them in principle. Though more simple in construction, it possesses the following advantages over all other Wringers now offered to the public. The EUREKA is the only Wringer that is Reversible, Adjustable to any Thickness of Clothes, and Self-Adjusting to the use of

PATENT ELLIPTICAL STEEL SPRINGS,

Which produce a UNIFORM PRESSURE upon Garments of any Thickness or Quality.

The PROVIDENCE EUREKA has the HINGE CLAMP, which will make Twice the Speed of any Wringer in the market, and will Wring Clothes in half the time. It has REVERSIBLE SPRINGS, SAVING Time Labor and Clothes. It is PERFECTLY SAFE and DURABLE in the use of
